Trade Secret Protection & Misappropriation

Brown Bag Luncheon Seminar

We live in the information age, when proprietary information can be more valuable than physical assets. Sometimes the value of information depends on its being known only to its developer. When the information constitutes a trade secret, it may be protected by law. However, employers have also utilized claims of "trade secret misappropriation" and "unfair competition" against former employees to limit their ability to compete once they leave their position. This tension often triggers litigation over competing interests and policies. At this informative brown bag luncheon, speaker Richard Korb an attorney with over 25 years experience in business litigation, will review California rules governing trade secrets.
